1. Should you spend time designing forms from the user's perspective, or are they there simply to collect information from your users for the stakeholder's benefit?

1 / 1 point

- ☒ Yes. Time should be spent on good form design.
- ☐ No. Forms are used to simply correct information, so no need to spend time designing them.

✓ Correct

Correct! A poorly designed form may result in page and website abandonment due to user frustration, which benefits nobody as it may result in a drop in conversions and sales.

2. Which of these are guidelines or best practices for form design? Select all that apply.

1 / 1 point

- ☒ Make use of inline form field validation

✓ Correct

Correct! Inline form validation is a procedure that checks a visitor's information in real time as they fill out the form.

- ☒ Sort your form fields from the simplest to the most difficult

✓ Correct

Correct! Begin your form with the most straightforward field questions (such as name and email) before moving on to the more time-consuming questions.

- ☒ Keep forms simple and straightforward

✓ Correct

Correct! Avoid adding any unnecessary fields or questions. Include only the required information in your form.

- ☐ Use many columns

- ☒ Clearly label your form

✓ Correct

Correct! Give your form a label that lets your visitors know what will happen once they submit it.

3. The best practice is to use a Captcha instead of a reCaptcha during form design.

1 / 1 point

- ☐ True
- ☒ False

✓ Correct

Correct! The best practice is to use a reCaptcha instead of a Captcha during form design, as the Captcha is based on image identification.
